

Charalampos Balis - Brief CV

Charalampos Balis was born in Larissa, Greece, and is a graduate of the Department of Informatics of the Athens University of Economics and Business. He holds a Masters Degree and Ph.D. Degree in Health Informatics from the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. He is member of the Laboratory Teaching Staff of the Department of Medicine of the University of Thessaly in the Laboratory of Cytogenetics and Molecular Genetics.

He has worked as a specialized scientist in Health Informatics with teaching duties in the School of Health Sciences of the Cyprus University of Technology and in the Open University of Cyprus in the Postgraduate Program: Applied Health Informatics and Telemedicine. He has been worked for many years as Scientific-Laboratory Associate in Health Informatics Laboratory of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens (Department of Nursing).

His teaching experience in Higher Education relates to the following subjects: health technology and computing, telemedicine applications, patient data management systems - health decision support systems, electronic patient records, health knowledge technology, biostatistics, health research methodology, etc.

His research interests are mainly focused on the fields of: health informatics, information systems development and evaluation in the field of health, biomedical data analysis and processing, health informatics education and training, personal data security, electronic health, etc.